

Betty Harvey writes,

- > I am not a researcher or a medical person but it amazes me that
- > when they can't find a scientific or a known fact they automatically
- > assume that the reaction is psychological. It is mind boggling.

This, simply stated, is a result of the bankrupt ethics in the healthcare and scientific medicine industries.

America is fed up with the massive waste and fraud that is costing us 15% of our GNP to support these industries, while delivering marginal health care to the community.

Unfortunately, the "Clinton Plan", in whatever form it takes, will probably cost us an even greater sum. Bleah.

Steve