

In <C5nF2r.KpJ@world.std.com> steveo@world.std.com (Steven W Orr) writes:

>I looked for diab in my .newsrsrc and came up with nuthin. Anyone have >any good sources for where I can read?

Check out the DIABETIC mailing list -- a knowledgable, helpful, friendly, voluminous bunch. Send email to LISTSERV@PCCVM.BITNET, with this line in the body:

SUBSCRIBE DIABETIC <your name here>

Also, the vote for misc.health.diabetes, a newsgroup for general discussion of diabetes, is currently underway, and will close on 29 April. From the 2nd CFV, posted to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and sci.med, message <1q1jshINN4v1@rodan.UU.NET>:

>To place a vote FOR the creation of misc.health.diabetes, send an >email message to yes@sun6850.nrl.navy.mil

>To place a vote AGAINST creation of misc.health.diabetes, send an >email message to no@sun6850.nrl.navy.mil

>The contents of the message should contain the line "I vote >for/against misc.health.diabetes as proposed". Email messages sent to >the above addresses must constitute unambiguous and unconditional >votes for/against newsgroup creation as proposed. Conditional votes >will not be accepted. Only votes emailed to the above addresses will >be counted; mailed replies to this posting will be returned. In the >event that more than one vote is placed by an individual, only the >most recent vote will be counted. One additional CFV will be posted >during the course of the vote, along with an acknowledgment of those >votes received to date. No information will be supplied as to how >people are voting until the final acknowledgment is made at the end,

>-----(end of charter)-----