

John Elson (jelson@rcnext.cso.uiuc.edu) wrote:

: Has anyone ever heard of a food product called "Space Food Sticks?"

I remember those awful things. They were dry and crumbly, and I recall asking my third-grade teacher, Miss G'Francisco, how they kept the crumbs from floating around in zero-G. She had no clue.

I have not seen anything like them in today's space program.

Some Apollo technology is best forgotten.

-- Ken Jenks, NASA/JSC/GM2, Space Shuttle Program Office

kjenks@gothamcity.jsc.nasa.gov (713) 483-4368