

In article <1p7ciqlNN3th@tamsun.tamu.edu> covingc@ee.tamu.edu (Just George) writes:

>I will be traveling to Bangladesh this summer, and am wondering >if there are any immunizations I should get before going.

You can probably get this information by calling your public health department in your county (in Pittsburgh, they give the shots free, as well). There are bulletins in medical libraries that give recommendations, or you could call the infectious diseases section of the medicine department of your local medical school. You also will probably want to talk about Malaria prophylaxis. You will need your doctor to get the prescription.

Gordon Banks N3JXP | "Skepticism is the chastity of the intellect, and

geb@cadre.dsl.pitt.edu | it is shameful to surrender it too soon."