

jmcocker@eos.ncsu.edu (Mitch) writes:

>effect that one of the SSRBs that was recovered after the >recent space shuttle launch was found to have a wrench of >some sort rattling around apparently inside the case.

I heard a similar statement in our local news (UTAH) tonight. They referred to the tool as "...the PLIERS that took a ride into space...". They also said that a Thiokol (sp?) employee had reported missing a tool of some kind during assembly of one SRB. No more info as to the location in the SRB.

I agree, pretty weird.