

Thanks to all those who responded to my original post on this question. The final diagnosis was Stress. I did not take her for a chiropractic adjustment. (Rachel receives all her medical care at Keller Army Hospital since she is a military dependant, and the Army does not yet provide chiropractic adjustments as part of its regular health care.) I am hoping that the arrival of (1) Spring Break, and (2) College Acceptance Letters, will help. UNFORTUNATELY she was wait-listed at the college she most dearly wanted to attend, so it seems as though that stressor may just continue for a while. :-(
Meanwhile she is going on a camping trip with her religious youth group for spring break, which seems like a good stress-reliever to me.

Thanks again for everybody's help/advice/suggestions/ideas.

Ruth Ginzberg <rginzberg@eagle.wesleyan.edu>

Philosophy Department;Wesleyan University;USA