In article <28641@galaxy.ucr.edu> datadec@ucrengr.ucr.edu (kevin marcus) writes:

>Are there any public domain or shareware astronomy programs which will >map out the sky at any given time, and allow you to locate planets, nebulae, >and so forth? If so, is there any ftp site where I can get one?

I posted my public-domain MSDOS program "sunlight.zip" to "sci.astro" yesterday.

It easily locates the sun, moon, and planets, and can also be used to locate other objects if you input their Right Ascesion and Declination.

Use "uudecode" to extract.

Robert Sheaffer - Scepticus Maximus - sheaffer@netcom.com

Past Chairman, The Bay Area Skeptics - for whom I speak only when authorized!

"Marxism and feminism are one and that one is Marxism"

- Heidi Hartmann and Amy Bridges, quoted by Catharine MacKinnon above the first chapter of her "Toward a Feminist Theory of the State"